Description :

PDF-171b2 | It was said of Russian composer Alexander Borodin (1833–87) that "no musician has ever claimed immortality with so slender an offering." His lifelong work as a graduate research chemist and teacher preoccupied him, leaving little time for the music composing that he loved. But while the quantity of Borodin's compositions was small, the quality of his music was extraordinarily high. Such works as... "Polovtsian Dances" and "In the Steppes of Central Asia" in Full Score (Dover Music Scores)
